FRANKFORT MAN DIES OF INJURIES

Conrad Bettenhausen Suffers Punctured Lung In Truck Crash

Conrad Bettenhausen, aged 76 years, well known Frankfort resident, was fatally injured late Saturday afternoon when a Thompson-Powers construction truck loaded with stone, sand and cement driven by Julius Muentnich of Joliet crashed into the automobile Mr. Bettenhausen was driving at the four corners south of Mokena on Wolf Road.

Mr. Bettenhausen was driving east on the gravel road at this point and evidently failed to see the stop sign at the intersection and drove his car in front of the oncoming truck. The impact was terrific and the car was over turned and dragged the truck along over the street. When the overturned car finally stopped in a little ditch it was crushed as though a railroad locomotive had hit it.

Andrew Cappel and several other men filling silo on the Ernest Lehnert farm a short distance west of Wolf road, saw the accident and quickly hastened to the scene of the accident. Mr. Bettenhausen who was alone in his car was extricated from the wreckage and taken to the office of Dr. W. V. Hedges in Frankfort who upon examination, found the aged man very gravely injured and he was at once rushed to the Silver Cross hospital in Joliet where he died Tuesday morning at 2 o'clock.

Mr. Bettenhausen suffered a punctured lung by one of several fractured ribs and other serious internal injuries. Pneumonia developed and Mr. Bettenhausen's case was hopeless.

An inquest into the death of Mr. Bettenhausen was held Wednesday afternoon at two o'clock in the B. A. Zechlin funeral parlors in Frankfort by Dr. E. A. Kingston, Will County coroner. The coroner's jury returned a verdict of accidental death.

Born in Koenigsfeld, Germany, February 24, 1860, Mr. Bettenhausen came to America in 1867 and first located in Orland Township, and later in Tinley Park.

In 1881 he was united in marriage with Margaret Felten in Green Garden. To this union three sons and two daughters were born. Mrs. Bettenhausen died in 1888.

On May 4, 1889, Mr. Bettenhausen was united in marriage with Miss Dora Johnson in Green Garden. They resided in Green Garden until 1910 when they moved to Frankfort.

He is survived by his widow, two daughters, Mrs. John Harnack of Green Garden and Mrs. William Engleman of Frankfort, one son, George Bettenhausen, of Frankfort, five grandchildren, three great grandchildren, one sister, Mrs. Katherine Hopman of Tinley Park and three half-brothers, Jacob Bettenhausen of Chicago Heights, Adam Bettenhausen of Blue Island and George Bettenhausen of Tinley Park.

The funeral was held from Mr. Bettenhausen's late home in Frankfort Thursday afternoon at one o'clock at the Frankfort M. E. church where Rev. C. F. Schellhase officiated at the services. Burial was made in the Roschill cemetery in Green Garden Township.

Mr. Bettenhausen was a kindly man, highly respected and his many friends deeply regret his tragic passing. He was one of the oldest subscribers of The News-Bulletin, being one of its first subscribers when the paper was founded in 1919.

Time Change Causes Confusion

The time change question will work a lot of confusion after next Sunday when Joliet and other Will County towns will change back to standard time, but the Cook County towns will remain on eastern standard time corresponding with the present daylight saving time. The Rock Island suburban trains will continue to operate on the present schedule and will not change back to central standard time until Chicago decides what time to adopt at the November 3rd election. Students attending the Joliet High School who would prefer to take the train instead of driving by auto to Joliet find themselves greatly inconvenienced. The morning train which they would have to take will arrive in Joliet at 7 o'clock standard time which will mean an hour to wait before the high school opens. In the evening the train returning will leave Joliet at 5:10 central standard time.

Wells Corner School To Hold Bunco

The pupils of the Wells Corner School and their teacher, Miss Helen Nemeth, will give a card and bunco party, Friday evening, October 2 in the Homer Town Hall. Refreshments served free.

Organization of Mokena Band Being Considered

For a long time Mokena has felt the need of some kind of a musical organization and finally the idea is beginning to bear fruit. A movement has been launched to organize a Mokena School band, sponsored by the parents who are interested in having their children take part. Mr. R. Wight, of Joliet, present director of the Frankfort and New Lenox school bands is being slated to have charge of the local band. The charge for the lessons will be very small, it is understood.

There will be a meeting in the Mokena school auditorium Wednesday night September 30th at 8 o'clock, at which time the band proposition will be given very careful consideration. Anyone wishing to join this new organization is requested to attend this meeting.

The idea is a very commendable one and it is to be hoped it will be carried out successfully. Mokena has musical talent and there should be no difficulty in getting a band organized. Mokena has had no school band for over 20 years, the last school band being organized when Prof. S. J. Eakle was principal of the old Mokena school.

Mokena Orioles Massacred By All Stars 15 to 8

The Mokena All-Stars lived up to their name when they trounced the Mokena Orioles for the third time this year to the tune of 15 to 3. Murders-row was in evidence throughout the game as so many base-hits were rattled off their bats that the score keeper had to give up the job for the lack of pencils. The All Stars scored three runs in the first inning but the Orioles, undaunted, came back and tied it up in their half of the same inning, but from then on Homerding started tossing overhand instead of underhand and the Orioles were swinging with everything but the water bucket trying to get a base hit. George Lauffer started the game for the Orioles by hitting the first man up and when a deluge of singles and homers fell on him he was forced to give way to Wes Cappel who was treated with the same dose but not quite so harshly. Although the Orioles will be financially embarrassed for some time to come, they received a good lesson on how base ball should be played, and it was entirely free.

Methodist Women Hold Annual Meeting At Morris

The fall meeting of the Methodist Women's Association of the Joliet-Dixon group, met in the Morris M. E. church in Morris, Ill., Wednesday for an all-day session. Mrs. Leonard Bruder, of Mokena, president of the group presided at the meeting which opened at 9:30 a. m., following a half hour of registration and an informal reception.

Mrs. Mildred Buch played the organ Prelude which was followed by the group, of which there were over 300 ladies in attendance, singing, "O Master Let Me Walk with Thee". Mrs. J. J. Obenchain gave the address of welcome and Mrs. L. B. Hayden of Wilmington, Ill., responded.

Mrs. Mary Holdermann gave a history of the Morris church. The devotionals were very beautifully presided over by Mrs. Omar Ebenhack of Tinley Park, Ill.

Each Aid president gave a brief talk on "Needs We Have Met." At noon luncheon was served. The afternoon session came to order at one o'clock with the singing of "Catch The Vision." Mrs. E. S. Hunt Rock River Conference president of the Association, brought greetings. Mrs. A. J. Reitzel rendered a solo.

Three women spoke on the subject, "Rethink Our Standards By Women Who Care." They were: Mrs. P. D. Marshall, Mrs. J. C. Major, of Joliet and Mrs. Ralph Davis of Morris.

An open forum was conducted by Mrs. J. L. Pifer of Joliet.

Following the reports of the courtesy and nominating committees installation of the new officers took place. They were: Mrs. A. O. Hills, Joliet, president; Mrs. L. B. Hayden, Wilmington, first vice president; Mrs. E. Dralle, Green Garden, 2nd vice president; Mrs. Chester Coldwater, Elwood, recording secretary; Mrs. A. E. Lovett, Joliet, treasurer; Mrs. J.

WOLF ROAD CONNECTION WITH LINCOLN HIGHWAY COMPLETED

The long sought Wolf Road connection with the Lincoln Highway has been greatly improved by cutting down the last load of concrete being placed Wednesday afternoon at the end of of the existing pavement south of the Hickory Creek bridge. Powers-Thompson Construction Co., have made a fine paving job as they always do and the new highway will no doubt be much admired as it passes thru some real natural beauty, especially thru the Cleveland farm.

The next piece of highway to be completed is a stretch of Lincoln Highway from the Fitterer farm west to the foot of the Owen hill which work will be done by the McCarthy Construction Co. This portion of Lincoln highway has been greatly improved by cutting down the hilly spots and now the vision of approaching cars at the Wolf Road intersection will not be obstructed by dips in the road. The McCarthy Construction Co., have done a fine piece of work on the Lincoln highway and when the repaving of the stretch mentioned is finished, it will be a very commendable piece of construction work.

Considerable shoulder work still remains to be done on the Wolf road which, however, will not be open for traffic until the Lincoln highway repaving job is finished.

Republican Women To Meet In Green Garden Sept. 29

A Women's Republican meeting and Tea will be held in the Green Garden Town Hall Tuesday afternoon September 29 at 2 o'clock, under the direction of Mrs. Geo. Bobzin, committeewoman for Green Garden township and her committee. All the women of this community are cordially invited to attend.

Mrs. Hada Carlson of Moline, Ill., will be the main speaker who will talk on the national question and Mrs. Lottie Holman O'Neil and Mr. Warren Wood, representatives, will talk briefly on state affairs.

This is the first Republican woman's meeting to be held in this section of Will County in the present campaign.

Fall Festival Successful Affair

The weather man put a damper on the annual Fall Festival sponsored by the St. John Brotherhood of Mokena, Wednesday evening. The Brotherhood had planned to hold the Festival in the village park adjoining the church, but the rain compelled a change in plans and the festival was held in the church basement. There was a very good attendance and the affair proved to be very successful. A very sumptuous supper was served, followed by games and other amusements.

L. Pifer, Joliet, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Wm. Kelly, Joliet, historian and Mrs. Bayard Scotland, Joliet, publicity chairman.

The out-going president, Mrs. Bruder, was presented a beautiful bouquet of gladiolus as an expression of appreciation for the fine work which she has done during her years as president.

Indian Chief Visits Orland School

The students of the Orland Park grade and high school departments enjoyed a visit from a real southwestern Indian, Chief Red Feather, Tuesday afternoon, who gave a very interesting exhibition of ceremonial dances, shooting arrows and explaining various tribal customs, and many other interesting features of Indian lore and life.

One interesting incident, was his statement, that the Indians secured their glass beads from the Chinese.

The Indians, he declared, traveled a route thru Alaska to Asia at one time, and then traded or passed the beads on to the various tribes.

A luncheon is to be held at noon. It is planned to make this even an annual affair.

SYNOPSIS

Sleepy Cat, desert town of the Southwest, is celebrating the Fourth of July. Jane Van Tassel, beautiful daughter of Gus Van Tassel, hated owner of Gunlock ranch, has arrived from the East for the first time. She watches the Frontier Day celebration in company with Dr. Carpy, crusty, tender-hearted friend of the community. Henry Sawdy of the Circle Dot ranch, tricked in a fake horse race the day before by Dave McCrossen, foreman at Gunlock, plans revenge. He enters Bill Denison, a handsome young Texas wrangler, in the rodeo which McCrossen is favored to win, and lays heavy bets on him. Unknown to the crowd, Denison is a champion horseman. McCrossen and the young stranger tie in the various events. Denison then drops a cigarette carelessly. Racing down the track full tilt, he picks up the cigarette. The verdict goes to Denison when McCrossen refuses to attempt the stunt. Entreated by the crowd, Denison agrees to perform another trick. Jane Van Tassel is asked for her bracelet and throws it on the track. Just as Denison rides to pick it up a yell from Barney Rebstock, a McCrossen henchman, scares the pony, nearly costing the rider his life. Gun play is prevented by the intervention of Dr. Carpy. Back on Gunlock ranch after two years in Chicago, because of her father's illness, Jane gets lost riding in the hills and meets Denison, now a neighbor, who guides her home. Not knowing her identity, he speaks bitterly of Van Tassel. Jane tells McCrossen who brought her home and he denounces Denison as a cattle thief. Later she asks Dr. Carpy why her father is unpopular and he tells her it is because of Van Tassel's ruthless and unscrupulous character. Visiting her father in the hospital, Jane is warned to be wary of McCrossen's honesty, but her father urges her to be nice to him. Later McCrossen tries to woo her, but is sharply rebuffed. Once again Jane loses her way in the hills and meets Denison.

"Did you like circus work?" she asked offhand.

"Can't say I did. I never worked in a circus except that one season. It was only because I needed money bad, and it was big money to me. Then the lawyers got it all. Here's the fork for Gunlock Ranch."

He pointed. They were at the parting of their ways. A saucy impulse seized Jane. She was given to impulses and to doing whatever thing flashed into her head. She checked her horse, lifted her forearm, and unclasped the bracelet. "Since you've been so kind—"

The man had halted his horse. "Nothing at all!" he protested.

"—I'd like you," she went on, paying no attention to his disclaimer, "to have a souvenir—this bracelet." She held it out to him. He looked flabbergasted. "For what?" he stammered.

His embarrassment seemed to communicate itself to Jane—she could not have told why. "I'm grateful for your putting me on my way today, and that other night when I got lost, if you remember," she went on.

He swallowed. She was secretly delighted with his confusion. "Well, that certainly is mighty kind," he said haltingly. "But I couldn't accept such a beautiful thing for doing nothing at all."

"I've got lots of bracelets."

"But sometime I've got to find something I can really do for you."

She laid the bracelet in his outstretched hand.

"I certainly thank you a thousand times." His slow response left no doubt of what he felt. Her aim now was to escape his protestations. He put on his hat. She started to go.

"Please!" he exclaimed, raising his hand. She stopped. Her guide's brow ruffled a little in perplexity.

"What is it?" she asked, superciliously impatient.

He took his hat off again. "Would it be polite," he ventured, "to ask your name?"

"Tell me yours again," she said.

"Bill Denison."

She allowed her horse to turn into the ranch trail. Denison sat motionless, hat in hand, but looking directly at her. "You haven't told me your name yet," he remonstrated quietly.

"Oh! It's Marie. Good-bye!"

Not till after she had parted from Denison and was riding alone with her thoughts did Jane begin to feel really frightened. This was the man of whom she had heard lurid tales of rustling, an enemy of her father's, near-outlaw generally—Bill Denison.

She drew a long breath, thinking over her encounter with the redoubtable Bill; what she had said to him and how she had said it; what he had said to her and how he had said it; recalling his general appearance, his easy manner in the saddle, his peaceable features, and at last his brown eyes. As she drew near the ranch house, she resolutely dismissed him from her mind, or thought she did.

She was as hungry as a bear—but to all questioners she merely explained that she had taken a long ride over on the Reservation.

"Who was the man that brought you home?" asked McCrossen.

"Why, nobody."

"Ben Page said you rode back with a man."

So she had been discovered. No matter. "Oh, that man!" she exclaimed, tossing her head. "He was just somebody from the Reservation, going to Sleepy Cat."

In the meantime her rebuffs had not shaken the constancy of her foreman, McCrossen. He made continued appeal for her favor—so marked once in a while as to make her angry. She could hardly get away from him, but his conversations, his suggestions, and his persistence got on Jane's nerves.

Whenever McCrossen was going to ride over the ranch, Jane was not so riding. When he was riding to town, Jane was riding over the ranch. In fact, chiefly to be rid of him, Jane spent much time in the saddle. And she developed a particular liking for the hill trail to town; she usually rode that way, either coming or going. What impressed itself on her was that riding the hill road alone was not quite so exciting as the first time she had ridden it with a guide. But what had become of her guide?

She controlled her impatience until she could do so no longer. Starting one day to town with Bill Page, Jane asked discreetly about their neighbor, this man Bill Denison. She had heard so much about him that she'd begun to wonder what he looked like!

"Why, Miss Jane," answered Bill, "'ordin' to what I hear, Bill's been down to Medicine Bend on his lawsuit."

"But why need a man go down to Medicine Bend for a lawsuit, when there are courts in Sleepy Cat?"

"Well, this is before the U. S. Land Office; that's different." Suddenly Bill, peering down the trail, straightened up. "Why, there's Bill, right now, on his way to town. The critter's back."

"Who Was the Man That Brought You Home?" Asked McCrossen.

"Where is he? Oh, I see. The man that just rode around the bend?" Jane did some fast and bold thinking. She looked in her purse. "Bill!" she exclaimed in fancied alarm, "I've forgotten to bring Quong's grocery list for the kitchen. I'm afraid you'll have to ride back after it."

She was soon within speaking distance of the horseman ahead. Over-taking him, she slackened her pace.

"Good-morning," she said stiffly.

Denison looked around, checked his horse, touched his hat, and returned the greeting. But he was plainly confused, and Jane was correspondingly pleased. "We meet again," she said with a superior air. "And this time I'm not lost."

"I'm afraid I am, this time," he said slowly.

"How so?"

"Well, it happened I was just thinking about the other times we met, and wondering whether I'd ever see you again, when you dropped down out of the sky on me just now. It took my breath. On your way to town? So am I. Do you mind if I ride along with you?"

"I might mind if you didn't. In fact, if you don't mind a confession, I hurried a little to catch up. You were so kind before—"

"Nothing at all—"

"—and you gave me such good advice that I haven't been lost since. But I do feel safer, riding with company. So thank you again—if you're not terribly tired of being thanked."

"Just as much as you like, if you'll remember you're thanking me for nothing. I was afraid you'd gone back to Chicago."

"Where have you been all this time? I certainly couldn't have missed you."

If you ride this trail as often as I do."

"I've been away—down at Medicine Bend. How long is it since that day?"

"Oh, I haven't an idea. It was an awfully hot day, as I remember. Wasn't it?"

"I can't remember a thing about the weather. If I measured the time by my feelings, it would be about three years."

"How perfectly ridiculous!" pouted Jane.

"What I was afraid of was, you'd gone back to Chicago and I'd never see you again. Then I figured that if you went back to Chicago, I'd look there next winter for a circus job and try to get into the same show with you."

She looked at him, frankly amused. "Now wasn't that nice of you? Really, Mr. Denison, you make me perfectly ashamed of myself. Will you get mad now if I confess again? No, you mustn't. I just won't have it. But—I was kidding about being a circus rider. It was some of our crazy cowboys started that."

He repressed a smile. She saw it. "What amused you?" she asked.

"Nothing at all."

"Oh, yes it was. What?"

"You won't get mad?"

"Oh," she responded airily, "I never get mad."

"Well, I knew you were kidding because that time you rode up to Spring Ranch, I happened to see you come down the valley. It was after I'd heard these stories about circus riding. I said to myself, 'If that young lady ever rode in a circus, they'd have to tie her on.'"

Jane didn't like it—no girl could. But it gave her precisely the opening she wanted. "Now," she said with an attempted laugh. "It's my turn, and I hope you won't get mad."

"Try me—nothing'll make me mad."

Then, "You mustn't hate me because I am not someone you might have thought I was. I am Jane Van Tassel. My name is Jane—not Marie. I know you and Father haven't got along..."

They were jogging on, side by side. Then he looked over at her with an expression she had not before seen in a man's eyes. "I certainly won't ever hate you," he said very slowly. "I just—couldn't."

CHAPTER V

Two days passed. Jane ordered up her pony. "What's takin' you into town today?" asked McCrossen suspiciously.

Bill came up with the pony. Jane tossed the question: "I forget some errands the other day. I shan't be gone long."

"Who's goin' with you?"

"No one. The boys are busy. I don't need the wagon today."

She had ridden some two miles toward town, when a turn in the trail brought to sight a man riding out of the woods. He checked his horse and waited for Jane. His face was expectant.

Jane's cheeks flushed in spite of herself. "I hope I haven't kept you waiting long," she stammered. He smiled and shook his head as if perfectly satisfied. "I came early," he confessed. "But I'd have hung around all night for this and not thought it long. Are we going up in the hills?"

"Not today. We—at least I am going into town." Jane had private feelings of reserve about riding into the hills with Bill Denison. "In the hills we might get lost," she suggested, naively.

"I might; but not in the way you mean. I'm lost right now. I've been lost for two days. Something came into my life two days ago that I hope will keep me dreaming the rest of my life."

"Don't talk nonsense."

"You don't dare ask what I was dreaming about?"

"Was it about another dreamer?"

"It was."

"I know who, then." He looked at her with pathetic hope. "It was about McCrossen," she added heartlessly.

"Never! It was—"

"Let's gallop," she exclaimed, cutting him squarely off. "I feel just like riding fast. I can beat you to that big pine!"

When she pulled up after a brisk run, her face was flushed, her eyes dancing, her lips parted in laughter. Denison was just behind her. "Why, you didn't race at all," she complained, looking around at him. "Why didn't you try to pass me instead of sticking at my heels all the time?"

"If I passed you, how in the world could I see you? I wish it was fifty miles more to Sleepy Cat—don't you?"

"No."

"Well, don't you wish it was just a few miles farther?"

"No."

"Not even two miles?"

"No."

"Well, one mile then?"

"Well, maybe a mile."

"Say two."

"What a persistent tease! Well—two, then. And no more."

"We could make it two by riding a little farther into the hills."

"You might ride up that way by yourself."

"I'm just a groom. I have to follow my mistress."

"Oh, no! We mustn't ride into town together. You gallop ahead."

Jane lunched that day at Dr. Carpy's hotel, hoping she might see Carpy himself. Fortune favored her. The doctor was in the office when she came.

"By the way, Doctor," she said, "I rode into town, part of the way, this morning with a neighbor of ours who doesn't bear a very favorable reputation at Gunlock, but—"

"What's his name?"

"Bill Denison."

WESTERN ASIA

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 13:24-33.

GOLDEN TEXT—They rehearsed all that God had done with them, and how he had opened the door of faith unto the Gentiles.—Acts 14:27.

PRIMARY TOPIC—How the Good News Spread.

JUNIOR TOPIC—How the Good News Spread.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Christianity Reaching Out.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Spread of Christianity in Western Asia.

Review Sunday provides a needed opportunity to determine not only whether the class members have learned and retained the truth taught, but, what is of equal importance, whether the teacher has accomplished the purpose in mind at the beginning of the series.

What was the aim set before us for the three months? "To lead the student to an understanding of New Testament Christianity, and to beget in him the desire and purpose to live the Christian life and to win others to faith in the Lord Jesus."

The test which we apply as the twelve lessons of the past quarter pass in review is

As a student, have I seen in the spread of Christianity the operation of a gospel of salvation which is the power of God for my salvation? Or, if I am saved, have I been stirred to a more earnest Christian life and a real passion for the salvation of others?

As a teacher, have I really used my opportunity to win the members of my class to faith in the Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ? Have I brought to bear on the lives of those in my class who are Christians the Word of God, stirring them to holiness of life and zeal for God's cause on earth?

If we cannot reply in the affirmative, should we not ask whether our efforts to teach have been largely fruitless? But let us not be discouraged, for even as we now review the lessons we have studied together the Holy Spirit is ready to do His work and apply the truth to hearts and lives.

To many teachers the preparation and presentation of the review lesson is the most difficult of any during the quarter. To the student who has given little or nothing to the preparation of weekly lessons it is often a rather disconnected and uninteresting recapitulation of twelve lessons.

A suggested method of gathering up the essential teachings of these lessons is to group them around the following seven points:

The spread of Christianity after our Lord's departure into the glory was distinguished by the fact that

1. It was by the preaching of a faith that began and continued in the power and demonstration of the Holy Spirit. God honors such preaching and teaching in our day.

2. It was a spiritual movement that demonstrated its God-given power by thriving on persecution. One wonders whether much of the activity of the church in our day has not fallen into the doldrums of pious respectability. Perhaps we need a little persecution.

3. It was not the propagation of theological theory or of a religious sect or party. It was a movement of the Spirit of God which saved men, and saved them to win and serve their fellow-men. True Christian service is nobler and more sacrificial than any non-Christian social service.

4. It was a movement in which laymen as well as religious workers had a place. Philip the layman served with Paul the apostle. Lay men and women let us be awake to our responsibilities and privileges.

5. Difference of opinion was not permitted to hinder God's work. Do we know enough to let God work among us, even if he does not work just as we think he should?

6. The missionary spirit of the preacher was carried over to the convert. This is a succession which God has continued to our day. Are we co-operating and helping it forward?

7. The gospel is for all men, Gentile as well as Jew, whether yellow, red, black, or white. The great commission is still our command and our authority to pray, give, and go, that all men may hear the gospel of the Grace of God.

Power of Little Rivers

Little rivers seem to have the indefinable quality that belongs to certain people in the world—the power of drawing attention without counting it, the faculty of exciting interest by their very presence and way of doing things.—Van Dyke.

On Being Just

Whatever is unjust is contrary to the divine will; and from this it follows that no true and abiding happiness can be gained by those who are unjust.—Stretch.

It Doesn't Pay—

Doing Favors for Others With Thought of Return Disappoints

"THE older I grow the more I am appalled by the ingratitude, the complete lack of a sense of obligation on the part of our fellow human beings."

"With me the people who come first are always those to whom I have no obligation whatsoever. Anything that is done for me is constantly on my mind and I am on the lookout to repay. But look about you and you will observe the most inconceivable indifference on the part of most otherwise decent people to what they owe to others. Indeed the code seems to be to cultivate those from whom some advantage may be forthcoming and neglect those to whom we are indebted. The answer to it all is to put yourself out for nobody; it doesn't pay."

The above lament was received by an international writer of note, who answers as follows:

It must have been an unusually unfortunate chain of experiences that gave this woman such an unhappy slant on human nature. But certain it is that favors done with thought of return are bound to bring disappointment. In this busy, hectic world, people are likely to be rather casual about give and take. That does not necessarily mean that they are unappreciative. They are just not punctilious. Frequently a kindness makes its mark but time passes before occasion presents itself to show appreciation, or to reciprocate. After all, if we think enough of people to put ourselves out for them, as our reader says, there must be a certain amount of faith.

If we do things for others only because we want to do them and find a certain satisfaction in it, we have nothing to lose. But the expected reward is something like the watched pot—very disappointing. In fact, it doesn't pay.

Instead of burning up withered stalks and plants, save them to lay over leaves used to cover flower beds. They prevent leaves blowing away. Burn these stalks and plants in the spring.

Be careful to wash all garden furniture before storing away. Nests built by insects in crevices in furniture are often overlooked. It is in this way insects often get into the house.

Refrigerator cookies may be wrapped in waxed paper and kept in refrigerator for several days. Make into a roll and slice when ready to bake.

If you have no individual molds, jellies may be molded in muffin tins. Turn the pan upside-down, place hot, wet towel over pan and jellies will slip out easily.

Steaming is a good way to cook vegetables, as it reduces the loss of minerals and vitamins. It is also economical, because you can cook several different vegetables at a time.

When making bread and butter pudding, sprinkle each slice of bread and butter with desiccated coconut instead of currants, and strew some on the top. This will make a change from the ordinary pudding and will be found very tasty.

If the stalks of broccoli are too thick, split them lengthwise before boiling, so that stalks will cook in the same amount of time as the buds. Broccoli should cook for 20 minutes after water starts boiling.

Old hardwood floors do not require refilling when being done over. Apply two coats of thin shellac, re wax whole surface and polish. Floors should be treated in this way twice a year.

Golden Anniversary

According to an insurance company, the chances of celebrating a golden anniversary depend entirely upon one's age and that of the consort at the time of the marriage. Taking an average case in which the bride is twenty-two years of age and the bridegroom twenty-five years of age, the chances that they will both survive and celebrate their golden anniversary is 168 out of every 1,000, or about one in six.

ADAMSON'S ADVENTURES The Stone Lady

By O. JACOBSSON

The Curse of Progress

Not This Time!

The bride of a few weeks noticed that her husband was depressed. "Gerald, dearest," she said, "I know something is troubling you, and I want you to tell me what it is; your worries are not your worries now, they are our worries." "O, very well," he said. "We've just had a letter from a girl in New York and she's suing us for breach of promise." — Montreal Star.

Long Way 'Round

The "Fat Lady" of the circus was taking a walk one day and, hesitating in the middle of the road, was knocked down by a taxi. Luckily, she was not hurt, and getting up, she stormed at the Cockney driver. "Why did you run into me, you fool. Couldn't you have gone around me?" she screamed. "Sorry, lidy," was the reply "I didn't fink I 'ad enough gasoline left."

Start Work on Worth School

Work is to be started soon on a $20,000 addition to the Worth school at 111th st. and Oak Park ave., in Worth, it was made known recently by Louis Macauley, school trustee.

The school board, it was understood, has received a loan of $11,500 and a grant of $9,409 from the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works.

Worth's allotment was part of the Government's $300,000,000 fund realized from the sale of PWA bonds taken on earlier projects and made available for grants as well as loans by the last session of Congress.

The project at the Worth school includes a one-story and a part basement addition. It will also provide a class room, auditorium, toilet rooms, and boiler rooms. The heating system will include radiation for the old building.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Matter" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, September 20.

The Golden Text was, "That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit" (John 3:6).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Now therefore hearken, O Israel, unto the statutes and unto the judgments, which I teach you, for to do them, that ye may live, and go in and possess the land which the Lord God of your fathers giveth you. For what nation is there so great, who hath God so nigh unto them, as the Lord our God is in all things that we call upon him for? Know therefore this day, and consider it in thine heart, that the Lord be in God in heaven above, and upon the earth beneath: there is none else" (Deuteronomy 4:1, 7, 39).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The three great verities of Spirit, omnipotence, omniscience, omniscience, filling all space, constituting all Science,—contradict forever the belief that matter can be actual" (p. 100-110).

The Oppolo Musical club of Chicago announces the beginning of its sixty-fifth season. This year they plan to give three concerts. The first will be Christendom's greatest musical appeal, Handel's "Messiah." Chicago first heard this great work on June 5, 1879 and since that time the entire community has been taught this oratorio by the Apollo club. This 78th performance of the work by the Apollo club will be given on December 28, at Orchestra Hall.

For the second concert, George Schumann's "Ruth" will have its sixth presentation on February 16, also at Orchestra Hall. This is a work of exceptional beauty, Wagnerian in its concept, and has always been well received by the public. It received its Chicago premiere in 1910.

The third and last concert of the season will be the "Children's Crusade" of Pierre. This great composition received the prize of the City of Paris in 1904. The children's choruses naturally form an important part of the work, in addition to the adult choir. This performance will be given on April 20, in Orchestra Hall.

The Oppolo club is engaging excellent soloists for all of these performances, and announcement of these will be made later. The club will have also the services of the Chicago Symphony orchestra. Dr. Edgar Nelson is the conductor, and Robert Birch, organist and accompanist. There is opportunity at this time for those who are interested in becoming members of this well known organization to do so. Applications may be sent to the Secretary's office, 243 S. Wabash avenue, in Lyon & Healy's.

CORN Contributes To Many Dishes

HOT stewed corn is such a good dish all by itself that some housewives continue to serve it year after year, and fail to realize that corn can be combined with many other ingredients in dishes that add desirable variety to the menu and taste equally good. Try it, as an ingredient, in one of the following dishes and you'll soon find yourself inventing other combinations.

Corn and Rice Fritters: Beat four egg yolks well and add one cup creamy corn and one-half cup boiled rice. Add one-fourth cup milk and then one and two-thirds cups flour, one teaspoon salt and two teaspoons baking powder sifted together. Fold in four stiffly-beaten egg whites. Drop by spoonfuls into hot deep fat—375 degrees—and fry until a rich brown. Serve at once with maple syrup. Makes about two dozen fritters.

This Tastes Like More

Baked Spaghetti with Corn and Lima Beans: Combine four cups cooked spaghetti with one cup canned creamy corn and one cup canned lima beans. Add two cups milk to three slightly-beaten eggs, add one and a half teaspoons salt and one-fourth cup chopped parsley, and pour over. Sprinkle with one-fourth cup grated cheese and bake about thirty minutes in a moderate oven. Serves eight.*

The American Record

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN
National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

One out of every two families in the United States owns the home it lives in. More than twenty million Americans own automobiles.

More than twenty million own radios. More than forty million have savings accounts.

More than sixty million hold insurance policies. No nation on earth can match this record.

Who made it all possible? The politicians? They'd like to have you think so. Often they try to create that impression.

But the credit doesn't belong to them.

It belongs to the American people themselves. It was they who achieved it — through long years of work and resourcefulness and insistence on the right to direct their own labors, their own lives, their own government.

That is something to remember when politicians imply that the American worker and earner is no longer capable of running his own affairs.

It is something to remember when they propose that we reject the American way of doing things in favor of methods suggested by experiments in Europe, where, under dictators or other political leaders, a bureaucratic central government plans and directs each individual's life and labor.

It's something to remember when they say in effect: "Well do all the directing, while you do all the work—then everybody will be happy."

But, under such conditions, would everybody be happy? The records of nations which have carried that system to its ultimate conclusion don't show so.

They show instead a tragic picture of turmoil and privation and loss of all personal liberty.

There stands the contrast.

On one side a free country with a higher record of individual well-being and a greater measure of personal liberty than any nation on earth; on the other, regimented autocracy with liberty and religion and opportunity in chains.

Which do the American people prefer?

The choice is ours to make.

Benefits From Forests
The benefits from forests are many. The most important are: Protection from soil erosion; retention of rainfall by the spongy layer of leaf mold on the forest floor; lessening of the occurrence of floods; purification of the air by the inhalation of carbon dioxide and exhalation of oxygen by the leaves of the trees; improvement of fishing and hunting; the profitable use of lands which are of no value except for forests.

Passengers in the smoking compartment on my train were arguing about why railroad business is picking up.

A factory owner said it was because of this new Free pick-up-and-delivery of less than carload freight. This is door-to-door service with no extra charge added to the freight bill.

A traveling salesman said it was because so many passenger and freight trains now run on faster schedules.

There was a school principal in the group and he said it was because train travel is so much cheaper for passengers. He said passenger fares are at the lowest point in history, with substantial reductions if you buy a round-trip ticket—and no more surcharge for riding in sleeping cars.

One man, a farmer, said he liked something he could depend on, that's why he was traveling by train.

Another man, a newspaper reporter, said people were in favor of railroad travel because it is by far the safest. He quoted a lot of statistics from a book called, "Live and Let Live."

A banker we all know by name said railroad tax payments mean a lot in this state.

We are proud of railroad achievements, appreciate the public's good will and increased patronage, and pledge continued progress.

WESTERN RAILROADS and THE PULLMAN COMPANY

what Irvin S. Cobb thinks about:

Middle Age and Painless Dentistry.
CULVER CITY.—Especially to those nearing middle age—the age when you begin to exchange your emotions for symptoms—it's gratifying to hear a New York scientist has hit on a formula for really painless dentistry. If he's right, the operation will only begin to hurt when you get the bill. Time was when you could hang onto your stately ruins until there was English ivy growing on them. Nowadays, no matter what ails you, they X-ray your teeth, which is a mistake to begin with, because I never yet saw an X-ray photograph that was flattering. And the next thing you know, you've a taste in your mouth like a druggist's dishrag; and your face looks like an old-fashioned buckskin purse, with the draw-string coming undone; and, on the inside, feels as empty as a haunted house.

Still, getting the upper plate from a mail order house has its compensations. Hot soup no longer makes blisters in the palate. Just a slight smell of burning rubber—that's all.

And a beautiful brilliant new set, shimmering from a tumbler of water alongside the reading lamp, certainly does brighten up the boudoir.

A True Maker of Melodies.

THEY gave a dinner here to the son of desperately poor immigrants, a modest, kindly little man who started life as a singing waiter in a bawdy bar-room. The dinner celebrated his silver jubilee as a maker of melodies. It has been just 25 years since he set the toes of the nation to tingling with "Alexander's Ragtime Band."

I can think of an occasional popular composer, who might be defined as a person who has a good memory and hopes no one else has; just as now and then—but this is a trade secret—you strike a writer who is getting by not because he is such a good writer, but because he has been such a close reader.

But for Irving Berlin, it may be said that his lyrics are his own and his aids are his own and his ideas are his own. Maybe that's why his tuneless output is so good—it reflects the spirit of an authentic creator, a genuine minstrel bard.

The Great Republican Hope.

I NEVER thought the stocks that licked the desert and the Apaches would be slackers, but neither in Arizona nor in New Mexico can I find trace of an authentic Presidential boom for any home-grown statesman. On the other hand, the sheep crop is reported good.

Maybe it's just as well. Already there has been more than one favorite son boom that reminded me of a new trunk store on a side street—you know, the kind that always opens with a grand closing-out sale.

Republicans here speak highly of Governor Landon of Kansas. Still, you never can tell. If you can believe what the Sunday papers print when the editors can't think of anything else, tragedy always followed owning the Hope diamond or digging into King Tut's tomb. But being indorsed for office by W. R. Hearst is pretty fatal, too, seems to me.

A New Kind of Inflation.

WHEN one of the New Deal groups—the President's consumers' council—announced the other day that Americans have larger hips than formerly, I just said: "Well, I'm glad things are expanding. There were several years when nothing I owned showed a tendency to go up except my blood pressure, and if hips are spreading, it merely means wider detours for a fellow when dancing on a crowded floor."

But now another White House pet, the Works Progress administration, gives a real thrill by promising to expose spinach, proving there are plenty of vegetables just as good for the diet, that taste like something and not like spinach. Maybe they'll yet find a use for spinach—by applying it externally, say? Personally I'd rather wear it in my hair than try to eat it. So would you, reader, if you were only brave enough to come out with the truth.

England's New King.

IN THE matter of their ruling monarchs, the English are luckier than some. The crown is never tarnished nor the people ever shamed, for all their kings are gentlemen and all their queens are queens. That's why, I think, Britain will keep her royal line, while we keep our flag, which ought to be quite a long spell, in case any communist person should ask you.

So, to the witty and engaging youngish gentleman, who picks up the mantle that slipped from the tired shoulders of a kindly and gracious elderly gentleman, we over here offer our best wishes. We know Your Majesty invariably will show good taste, and whilst you may not always do the right thing—that would be asking too much of any man—we're dead sure you'll always say it.

BEAUTIFUL BUT—SMART!

BEAUTY is as beauty does—and this beauty, photographed unconventionally by our intrepid newshawk, has learned her lesson well. A tubful of soothing hot water daily, plenty of soapy lather with her favorite soap and perfect relaxation is her formula for all-over complexion beauty. More and more women are depending upon the cleansing, restful qualities of hot water to preserve the beauty of their skins, and are guaranteeing an unfailing supply of hot water at all hours of the day and night with the modern automatic electric hot water service. Heating water by electricity is one of the latest and most valuable gifts of electricity to the home.

News-Bulletin, a newspaper of general circulation printed and published in the Village of Mokena, in the County of Will, State of Illinois, and the foregoing lists of lands and other real estate situated in the County of Will, State of Illinois, on which taxes remain due and unpaid for the year of 1935 and previous years and taxes paid under protest are duly published in said newspaper in the issue of Friday, September 25, 1936, and that the said list was carefully examined and compared with the list furnished by the Treasurer of said County for publication and found to correspond therewith; that the number of copies was equal to the whole circulation of said paper for that day.

I do further certify that the said News-Bulletin is a newspaper that has been regularly published for at least six months prior to the publication of said notice and that I am duly authorized to make the certificate.

Principal Opens School Under Difficulties

With school scheduled to open in a few days, Lester Buford, Principal of Johnson City high school recently was still faced with the problem of finding 12 of his 14 teachers.

When applicants were told that it would be three long years before they could expect to receive their pay, most of them soon lost interest in teaching in Johnson City.

Most of last year's teachers, who do not expect to receive their pay for last year's teaching before 1938, had decided to go some place where payday comes sooner. However, by the time the second week of school opened Mr. Buford, by super salesmanship, had persuaded twelve persons qualified for a high school certificate to start to work instructing the boys and girls of Johnson City, knowing that their first payday would be in 1939 unless relief came from some unknown source.

These twelve persons were told that they would receive their pay in orders which could not be cashed at any price, but probably could be traded at a discount for $20 worth of groceries per month at a store in a neighboring town. Married teachers with families can trade in a little more.

Dozens of other school districts in Illinois are working under similar conditions. Schools report the following conditions as of June 1, 1936: Elmwood Park elementary school, Cook County, teachers' salaries approximately one year in arrears, teachers' orders discounted at 30 per cent and the debt of the district exceeds the constitutional limitation. Gillespie elementary school, Macoupin County, 8 months behind on teachers' pay, defaulted on bonds, and debt exceeds the constitutional limit of 5 per cent of the assessed valuation.

Odin district, Marion County, back 25 months in teachers' pay, debt 10.32 per cent of the assessed valuation, more than double the constitutional limit. Royalton, Franklin County, debt of the district 11.02 per cent of the assessed valuation and back 12 months on pay of teachers, bonds in default, judgments $15,000. Sesser elementary school of the same county, bonds in default, debt 9.14 per cent of assessed valuation. Western Springs, Cook County, bonds refunded, debt 9.15 per cent of assessed valuation. Two years of teachers' orders unredeemed.

FLB Loans In Will County Exceed 3,000,000

Will County farmers have borrowed more than $3,000,000 through the Federal Land Bank of St. Louis from May 15, 1933 to September 1, 1936, according to a statement from C. E. Maxwell, vice-president, in summarizing the reports made to the bank by J. Franklin Hedgecock, Joliet, local national farm loan association secretary-treasurer.

The period covered in the summary is since the passage of emergency legislation making available Land Bank Commissioner loans. Previously the Federal Land Bank could loan only up to 50 per cent of the normal value of a farm. During this period the Land Bank Commissioner on first mortgage security, or on second mortgage security in connection with a first mortgage to the Federal Land Bank could loan up to 75 per cent of the normal agricultural value. Of the 731 loans totaling $3,758,200 made in Will County, 402 amounting to $2,676,200 have been made by the Federal Land Bank and 329 for $1,082,000 by the Land Bank Commissioner.

A large part of these loans were made to refinance existing debts at lower interest rates thereby saving annually $1,950,000 for farmers in the state of Illinois. In the early part of the Farm Credit Administration's refinancing program many loans were made in Will County to redeem farms in foreclosure, to avoid foreclosure action, and to liquidate notes and mortgages for local banks thus benefiting their depositors and assisting business in general. Following the amendments to the Farm Credit Act made in 1935, an increasing proportion of loans has been made for the purchase of farms, particularly by young men and renters, who have found this a favorable method of acquiring farms for homes. Experience, equipment and a reasonable down payment are required.

Separated by Ice Barriers
Iceland and Greenland are only a comparatively short distance apart, but they are separated for many months of the year by impenetrable ice barriers.

Early Agriculture in Ohio
So independent were the early Ohioans on agriculture that most other endeavors were considered fruitless. For example, when a young physician wanted to become the husband of Gov. Duncan McArthur's daughter, the father questioned the possibility of the young man earning a livelihood in this profession.

Elevation of Kaffa
The general elevation of Kaffa, a district in the southwest part of the great Ethiopian plateau, is about 8,000 feet, while several peaks are over 10,000 feet.

BRISBANE

THIS WEEK

Choses Vues
Furs, Conscience-Proof
Caterpillars and Weeds
Wise Generosity

An able Frenchman, long since dead, wrote about choses vues—"things seen."

There are still many things to see and to hear, although there is nobody to write about them as that old Frenchman wrote.

At the head of the London Times' "personal column," some one pays to print this impressive extract from the Psalms:

"Seek the Lord, and His strength; seek His face evermore. Remember His marvelous works that He hath done; His wonders, and the judgments of His mouth."

You spend a moment wondering what kind of English man or woman, strong in faith, decided to put that text before statesmen that to-day seek the "face" of Hitler, Mussolini, Stalin, but forget the greater power of the Creator of those gentlemen.

After that, you read in the same Times this advertisement:

"Furs humanely obtained that can be worn with a clean conscience—full particulars from Maj. C. Van Der Bult, Wapenham, Towcester."

This being an ingenious and doubtless quite sincere appeal to the tender-hearted Englishwoman who does not like to think that the fur around her neck once belonged to an animal that suffered for days and perhaps weeks tortured in a trap.

Possibly the best way to "obtain furs humanely obtained that can be worn with a clear conscience" is to buy and wear some of the innumerable furs, from rugged bears to silky chinchilla, made from the skins of rabbits that are nourished in little hutchies in the suburbs of Los Angeles, and fed with "rabbit hay," tender young alfalfa, grown on the Mojave desert, a good deal of it on a ranch owned and operated by this writer.

When you buy furs, no matter what kind, with a rabbit skin foundation, you may be sure that the animal suffered very little, if at all, and when you buy that fur you also buy honest American alfalfa, which is a vegetarian product.

F. C. Cobb wrote from the Boy Scout reservation at Allaire, N. J.: "The last four week-ends have been spent by our scouts collecting tent caterpillar egg clusters from wild cherry and apple trees along the highways of Monmouth and Ocean counties. Many thousands of egg clusters, each containing on the average 250 eggs, have been destroyed."

No better work could be done by scouts and other boys. It is far better exercise than perfunctory "hikes," often exhausting for smaller boys.

The fathers of the boys, also in need of exercise, can be useful mowing weeds along highways, excellent work for the lungs and for reducing the waist.

Edward S. Harkness, generous young New York financier, gave to Lawrenceville School for Boys a sum that will make possible important new building, plus rebuilding and a more extensive system of small-group instruction, with more teachers.

Mr. Harkness, who does not like publicity, refused to make public the amount of his gift of Lawrenceville, but he gave $7,000,000 to Exeter academy, $13,000,000 each to Yale and Harvard, to finance their housing systems. That gives some idea of the size of his gifts.

Some Americans will agree that it is a good thing to have men of unusual ability accumulate wealth wisely.

Old-fashioned Americans would rather encourage such gifts and praise the givers than inculcate the notion that anybody with brains enough to accumulate wealth in this country of opportunity is probably a thief and ought to be in jail.

Mussolini knows how a dictator can keep his hold on the people. He establishes 2,000 government camps where half a million poor children enjoy free vacations at sea and mountain resorts. For nine years Mussolini has carried on this work.

In Europe, English, French, German, Italian or Czechoslovakian will believe anything you say about American crime, and that is hardly surprising.

The heading "Chicago Politician Dies Under Hail of Racketeers' Bullets" surprises nobody. There might be mild surprise if the heading read, "Chicago Politician Does NOT Die Under Hail of Racketeers' Bullets."

Initiation

Last Thursday afternoon the Freshmen were taken by surprise—or were they? The Sophmores told them to wear their old clothes, so some wise Freshmen became suspicious, although Miss Priest had warned them to beware of Friday! Nevertheless it all happened Thursday. The "frosh" were invited downstairs where the "sophs" proceeded to have their fun with them. Each frosh had to take his medicine by himself, and not one proved to be a poor sport. That is a good record for the freshmen class because some of the things they were required to do were not of a most pleasant nature.

Freshmen Initiation

Toward the end of the initiation ceremony, an Indian, clad in his native garb, came upon the scene, amused with a song and dance, and then announced there would be an Indian entertainment at school Tuesday, Sept. 22, at 1 p. m. After this announcement, everyone went upstairs where some really delicious refreshments of ice cream and cookies were served by the Sophmores.

A RED HEADED WOMAN WAS THE CAUSE OF IT ALL
That medicine cures some aches and pains
Of that there is no doubt.
The Doc prescribes it for rheumatism
And fever chills and gout.

But here's a cure for aching bones
And tired muscles of your frame
Go out and step around a bit
With a real hot, red-headed dame.

To some this may seem foolish
But I have proof without doubt
Of how Pa Clemens got young again
And put his aches to rout.

A bird told me the story
How he had doctored for years
To cure his aging members
And drive off the old age fears.

To bed he went, each night at 8
No "wee small hours" for him
Said he, "That's the correct way to live
To conserve your vigor and vim."

No nite-clubs and no parties,
No cocktails and no gin
For men as old as he was
These things were a crime and sin.

But now the worm has turned,
At home there's eternal strife
It all has happened in the last few weeks
Since the red head came into his life.

He never stays home, anymore at night
His home, it is on the dance floor
No more pains or aches, but oh
how he shakes
Since she taught him to
"Terpsicore".

He hangs out late and he can't find the gate
Or key hole in the door,
He knows all the "Blue Notes" and now buys "Fur Coats",
Silk Stockings and things by the score.

The show given Tuesday after school at the Tinley Park school by an Indian chief was quite disappointing to those who attended.

He had represented his performance as being educational and presented letters of recommendation from other schools. Because the show developed into more or less of a carnival exhibition, he was asked to close the performance before the scheduled time.

The school's share of the proceeds will probably be used toward improving the library.

James English and family have really seen a very large part of our own United States this summer. They recently returned from a trip thru southwestern and western states, covering a total of six thousand miles without any mishap. This is about the longest vacation trip taken by any Tinley Park family this year that we know of.

THE UPPER ROOM MEETS A LONG-FELT NEED

Church leaders of all denominations have long felt the need of a guide for religious devotions in the home. And such a guide is now available in the form of a 96-page booklet, published quarterly, called The Upper Room, which contains a scripture reading, devotional meditation, and prayer for each day of the quarter.

Publication of The Upper Room was begun in 1935 through the co-operation of evangelistic boards of the Northern and Southern Methodist churches as a joint evangelistic project on a nation-wide scale. The devotional material is being written by outstanding religious writers of America, and the booklet is being printed and distributed on a cost basis at five cents for copy. This extremely low price makes The Upper Room available to everybody.

It is almost unbelievable, but true—1,581,000 copies of the first six issues of The Upper Room were delivered to all quarters of the globe, and copies of the current issue alone will go into 500,444 homes! Hundreds of letters have come into the editor's office telling of the effective use of The Upper Room in hospitals and similar institutions. While others tell of its use by prisoners in many American prisons.

"Somehow you have hit the stride that takes the heart and mind happily on the trail toward God," wrote a California pastor in appreciation of The Upper Room.

A lady in Asheville, North Carolina, writes: "The Upper Room is inspirational and uplifting. It's meditations, prayers, and scripture references, all of which I read daily, are most helpful to me."

The Upper Room is being sold and distributed for the good it can accomplish and not for profit. Copies of the October, November, December issue can be obtained from the local Methodist pastor.

Roy Glahn will be heard on Station WCFL Friday evening, at 9:45.

Mayor Wm. Kollman and George Yunker left Wednesday morning on a fishing trip to Arbor Vitae lake in Wisconsin. They expect to be away for a week. Wm. Schmidt is serving as janitor of the Orland Park school in Mr. Kollman's absence.

The annual Fall festival and chicken supper of the St. Michael parish will be held in the church hall on October 11th. Further details will be given next week.

Fifteen Orland students are attending the Blue Island High School this year.

This coming Sunday is the last Sunday of the M. E. church conference year and Rev. John Mullen will use as his text "For Their Sakes I Sanctify Myself."—John 17-19.

Butler Warns of Press Curb

President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia university expressed his views on press freedom in a letter to the British Institute of Journalists made public here recently.

The letter was addressed to Hugh W. Dawson, president of the institute, which is meeting in Edinburgh, Scotland. The organization had invited Dr. Butler to appear as a speaker on their program.

He declined, with regrets, and warned the British newspaper writers that propagandist interpretations of news rendered a press as controlled as one "under the heels of a despot."

His letter follows: "To me it would have been a particular pleasure to be present at this conference, for I question whether at any time in the history of journalism the responsibility of the press for the information and instruction of public opinion has ever been anything like so great as it is at the moment."

"Whether a people lives under a democratic system or whether it has accepted an anti-democratic form of government, be it communism or fascism or dictatorship in any form, the stubborn fact remains that in the long run each of these widely differing forms of social, economic and political orders must rest for its continued existence upon public opinion."

"Public opinion and the sources of its information may be controlled by despotism for a certain length of time. Evidence of that is all around us. It is unthinkable, however, that such control can continue indefinitely."

"There must come a time when the instinct for individual expression will reassert itself and will begin anew that familiar course of discussion and debate which in the long run will lead back to Democracy, whether it be direct or republican or monarchical in its form of political organization."

"Let it never be forgotten that there are various and very different forms of restricting or denying the freedom of the press. This may be done formally or informally by governments, but it may also be done by endowed or well-intrenched propagandists who, instead of recording the news as it really is, record it in the form of their own biased and propagandist interpretations. Such

Eight New Homes Sold

Eight of the 12 demonstration homes now being erected in Harlem Heights, the new suburban community being developed at 123rd and Harlem ave., south of Worth, by the Robert Bartlett Realty company, have already been sold, according to the owners and developers of the project.

The purchase of the new dwellings it was announced are the results of the realty company's offer to dispose of the demonstration homes at actual costs of construction, plus the price of the land, and providing the buildings were subscribed for before their completion.

Forty dwellings have been completed. A press is quite as much controlled and unfree as is a press which is under the heel of a despot."

W. A. Ferguson, seventy-five, wealthy Carbondale real estate man, died after a long illness.

There will be no home grown pumpkins for pies in the Quincy area this year because the crop is total failure.

Allen H. Taylor of Bloomington, eighty-six, who heard Abraham Lincoln's famous address at the site of the battle of Gettysburg, is dead.

Three Marion coal miners employed at a small slope mine were injured, one of them seriously, by falling rock.

Samuel Shedden, seventy-one years old, who was treasurer of Kane county from 1902 to 1906, died in his Chicago home.

The Butler Street Mill, a landmark in Olney for 75 years, was destroyed by fire at a loss estimated at $25,000.

Charles Rader, sixty-five years old, of Elgin, was fatally injured when he stepped in front of a south bound Chicago Motor Coach company bus in Chicago.

Elmer W. King, seventy-two, for fifty-three years connector with the Western Union Telegraph company before retiring on pension two years ago, died in Quincy.

Joseph Mayerhofer of Springfield was fatally injured when an automobile ran into him as he bent behind his own machine to repair a tire.

A. A. Thompson, seventy-one, father of Floyd E. Thompson of Evanston, former State Supreme court justice, died at his home in White Hall.

Raymond Vosburgh, sixteen years old, of Kewanee, wanted for passing a bad check in his home town, was arrested at the Palmer house in Chicago, where he had been living for three days.

Bert Yates, twenty-five, Taylor Springs, was struck by an east-bound train on the Big Four railroad and received injuries that caused his death several hours later.

Mrs. Isabella Smith, fifty-four, was injured fatally and ten others injured, three seriously, in an auto collision at the junction of the upper free bridge road and state route 116 near Peoria. Two cars carrying 13 persons were involved.

Rev. C. A. O'Reilly, sixty-nine, who was in charge of St. Mary's Catholic church in Edwardsville for forty-three years, died in St. Elizabeth's hospital, Granite City. Father O'Reilly was widely known in southern Illinois.

Injuries suffered in an automobile accident proved fatal to Mrs. William I. French, forty-eight, of Freeport. A manslaughter indictment was sought for Lee Epling, twenty-nine, Rockford driver of the second car involved in the accident.

J. J. Demotte, a leader in the civic and business life of El Paso for many years, died at his home. He was one of the leading furniture dealers in central Illinois. He was chairman of the local drives for bond sales and for service organizations during the World war and was president of the Woodford county fair for six years.

Appointment of Wallace Clark, a member of the staff of the midwest office of the Red Cross in St. Louis, as technical supervisor of the Illinois old age pension organization was announced in Springfield by James H. Andrews, state pension superintendent. Clark formerly was associated with the United Charities in Chicago.

A picked group of twenty members of the incoming freshman class at the University of Illinois will be given a special training course in radio work, to be followed by actual experience on the staff of the university's broadcasting station, WILL, Josef F. Wright, director of the station and director of public information at the university, announced.

C. L. Rice, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce, announced that the association has asked the Sanitary district to turn over its land on both sides of its north shore channel to Wilmette, Evanston, Niles Center, and Lincolnwood to be used for recreational purposes. Officials of the Sanitary district did not comment on the plan, other than to say that it is feasible.

A coroner's jury in Peoria exonerated Shep, a large shepherd dog, from blame for the death of Frank Barthell, fifty-four, who was drowned in the Illinois river. Coroner William B. Elliot investigated the dog's part in the tragedy after he was told Shep was in the river as Barthell fought to keep afloat and that the dog had placed his paws on the drowning man's shoulders.

Fred W. Rubly, village collector of Highland Park for the last twenty-one years, died after a long illness in his home. He was forty-nine years old. Surviving him are his widow, Margaret, a son, and three daughters.

His second suicide attempt in two days proved fatal to Albert Schultz of Rockford, thirty-seven. He took gas at his home, but was revived. Then he drank a pint of poison and walked to a quarry pool, apparently with the intention of hurling himself in the water. He collapsed a few feet from the pool.

Yes, He Caught Enough for His Friday Dinner

These five giant tuna fish, weighing 3,340 pounds, and a shark weighing 770 pounds, were caught off Liverpool, Nova Scotia, by the famous amateur fisherman, Dr. John R. Brinkley, of Del Rio, Texas. He is shown with his son. The tuna on the left, 788 pounds, was bigger than the tuna caught by Zane Grey which held the previous record.

JERRY'S SUSPICION DIES HARD

ONCE faith and trust have been driven out by suspicion it is twice as hard to restore them as it was to establish them in the first place. That is why any one who plants in the mind of another suspicion of some one else does the very worst kind of an injury if it happens that there are no grounds for a suspicion.

Just take the case of Jerry Muskrat and Farmer Brown's Boy. Through kind and thoughtful deeds for a long time Farmer Brown's Boy had established faith and trust in the minds of Jerry Muskrat and all the other little people of the Green Forest, the Green Meadows, and all the Smiling Pool. They had learned to regard him as a true friend. Then along had come a stranger who also pretended to be a friend. Day after day he brought dainties for Jerry Muskrat until Jerry regarded him just as he did Farmer Brown's Boy and wasn't the least bit suspicious.

He No Longer Swam About Freely When Farmer Brown's Boy Was There as He Used To.

Then the stranger had set traps and Jerry had been caught by the tail in one of them. It was just good fortune that he had been able to get away, but all Jerry's faith and trust in two-legged creatures called men had been destroyed. He was suspicious of every one of them, including Farmer Brown's Boy. To be sure the latter had taken away the stranger's traps and had left a notice warning the stranger to stop trapping along the Laughing Brook and around the Smiling Pool. But Jerry couldn't read that notice. All he knew was that the stranger had been good to him just as Farmer Brown's Boy had and then had set a trap for him. How could he be sure that Farmer Brown's Boy wouldn't do the same thing?

This play suit created by Vera Borea is made like a child's rompers. It is dark gray toile with yellow gold buttons and a short jacket of yellow gold ribbed velvet.

So, though Farmer Brown's Boy came to the Smiling Pool every day and did everything he could think of to show Jerry that he was a true friend, Jerry continued to be suspicious. He no longer swam about freely when Farmer Brown's Boy was there, as he used to do. Instead, he remained hidden until Farmer Brown's Boy went away.

Always the latter left good things for Jerry to eat, things Jerry was fond of—pieces of sweet apple, carrot, parsnip, and pumpkin. But for a long time Jerry would not touch them. When at last he did venture to eat them it was only after a very careful search for hidden traps.

The queer thing is that all the time Jerry wanted to trust Farmer Brown's Boy just as he had in the past. But the memory of his sore tail and his dreadful fright kept suspicion alive. It simply wouldn't die. Farmer Brown's Boy knew it was so and understood why. It made him sad, and also it filled him with anger towards the trapper who had destroyed the old faith and trust.

UNUSUAL DISHES

THE following dishes are quite unusual and will be found both good to eat and nourishing:

Bran Ginger Cake.

Cream one-fourth of a cupful of shortening with one-half cupful of sugar, add one beater egg; beat well, then add one cupful of bran. Mix and sift together one and one-half cupfuls of flour, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of soda, one teaspoonful of ginger, two teaspoonfuls of cinnamon, and add alternately to the first mixture with one cupful each of sour milk and molasses. Pour into a well-greased pan and bake in a moderate oven 40 minutes.

Fish Souffle.

To two cupfuls of flaked salmon or tuna fish add one-fourth teaspoonful of salt and the same of paprika, one-fourth cupful of lemon juice and mix well. Pour one cupful of scalded milk over one cupful of fresh bread crumbs, add the well-beaten yolks of six eggs and the fish. Fold in the stiffly-beaten egg whites and pour into a well-buttered baking dish, set in a pan of water and bake until well set. Serves eight.

Chicken and Rice Souffle.

Take one and one-half cupfuls of diced chicken, one cupful of cooked rice, season well with salt and moisten with chicken gravy, adding two well-beaten egg yolks and carefully fold in the stiffly-beaten whites. Bake in a well-buttered pan until a golden brown.

Rice and Cheese Roll.

Mix two cupfuls of cooked rice, one cupful of grated cheese, one beaten egg, one teaspoonful of salt, a dash of cayenne, one tablespoonful of milk, one-fourth of a cupful each of bread crumbs and chopped nuts. Add more milk if needed and shape into croquettes. Roll in crumbs and bake in the oven until brown. Serve with tomato sauce.

Griddle cakes will be much more wholesome if a handful of bran is added to the batter, giving the roughage needed in the food.

THE GOAL

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THERE is no path a pilgrim takes, Whether it be by hills or lakes, He really knows. He only knows The shrine it leads to, way it goes, But not until the morning breaks Knows what tomorrow may disclose.

Perhaps the morning will be fair, Perhaps the heavens dark with care, And yet tomorrow's but a day. As long as he is on his way, And knows the shrine awaits him there, It matters not if blue or gray.

And so the path of living hath Both songs of joy and sounds of wrath.

A little while the thunders roll, And yet they need not fret the soul— The thing that counts is not the path,

For all that matters is the goal. © Douglas Malloch.—WNU Service.

DISSOLVING COIN

WILL water dissolve a coin? The magician apparently proves that it will do so. It is a trick, of course, but a surprising one.

The coin is placed under a handkerchief which is held above a partly filled goblet, which rests on the magician's hand. The right hand releases the coin; beneath the handkerchief, it clicks into the glass. The cloth is raised; the right hand gives the glass for examination. The coin has disappeared.

Just before he drops the coin, the magician tilts the glass slightly. Thus the coin falls past the goblet and strikes its base. Hearing the clink, listeners think the coin is in the glass. The left hand retains the handkerchief and passes the goblet for examination.

Charting Your Life

If you want to find new happiness in life, you must decide what things will bring you that happiness. If you are in doubt of your true goal, you must trust your intuitions. If you cannot find a specific answer, go with your inner longings. Do the work you most desire to do.

Never worry about consequences when you do this. Choose the thing most important to you and seek that first. This is the dynamic rule of successful worry.

But if you have decided to follow it there is still another point to remember. Do not expect to achieve perfect success. There is an average ratio of error in all conduct. Why should you escape it or blame yourself because you sometimes fail? Growth means perpetual unfolding, a struggle up where we have fallen down.—David Seabury, in Cosmopolitan.

Washington. — As the campaign gets more heated it becomes increasingly evident that the political battle this year will result more times in a spade being called a spade—men being named names—than has happened in a good many previous years. When this stage is reached it invariably means that party workers as well as party leaders are thoroughly imbued with the sense of battle and it means further that no phase of either party policy or personal affairs of the candidates themselves escapes the attention of the opposition.

That probably is the reason why Mr. Roosevelt lately has found himself being "kidded" to a greater extent than usually occurs about his "non-political" visits to various sections of the country. The opportunity has not yet come for Governor Landon, the Republican nominee, to be made the butt of such jokes or the subject of such personal attacks, but undoubtedly it will arrive long before November 3.

To refer again to the President's "non-political" trips, the correspondents here have been having a great deal of fun about the President's determination to learn first-hand about the flood areas of Pennsylvania and New England and the drought areas of the middle western plains.

This is significant. It shows an important change of attitude on the part of the Washington observers who seldom find themselves in a position where they can tell everything they know. It is significant also from this standpoint that it shows Mr. Roosevelt to have lost the loyalty of a great number of those writers. Time was when 95 per cent of the Washington correspondents were with Mr. Roosevelt on everything he said or did and when they found vulnerable spots or weaknesses in his statements or actions they were inclined to overlook them. Such is not the case now, however, and I think it may be added with candor that the President's programs and policies, his speeches and statements in press conferences are examined with utmost scrutiny.

From the Democratic standpoint, this is distressing. From the Republican standpoint, it is a highly valuable change in circumstance. The reason is that as long as the President had a completely "friendly press" he did not need to be so careful nor did he ever need to fear that interpretations would be placed upon his statements or his actions, other than the interpretation which he desired. It takes no stretch of the imagination to realize forthwith that any time he says or does anything to which exception can be taken, some of those correspondents will point out the other possibilities.

I find generally speaking that the writing corps doubted that the President's Pennsylvania and New England visits were based solely on his desire to know what the federal government should do to prevent floods. One correspondent was so extremely frank as to write in his metropolitan newspaper that Mr. Roosevelt foresaw not a flood of water but a flood of Republican votes. Of course, this is an exaggerated position for any unbiased writer to take, but there were many number of those correspondents who laughingly inquired why it was so urgently necessary for the President to visit the flood areas at this time—considering that there was no Congress in session and no definite provision for the framing of flood relief plans.

Now as to the President's visit to the drought stricken area: The drought was present in the "dust bowl" as the brilliant young strategists of the New Deal organization have named the middle western plains. There can be no doubt like-wise that relief was needed and that a thorough-going understanding of the situation by those responsible in Washington should be obtained. Yet, I believe it was the consensus of the writers accompanying the President on that whirlwind tour of the dust storms that Mr. Roosevelt personally gained no knowledge of conditions that was not already available to him in reports from his subordinates. Indeed, I am told on very good authority that relief representatives who had gone into the drought area already had written their reports to the President and made their recommendations concerning policies to deal with that relief situation before he left Washington on that trip.

It must be quite obvious, however, that Mr. Roosevelt desired to see conditions about which so much was being written in the newspapers. I think he cannot be blamed for desiring the opportunity to witness things as they actually were before the rains came; but some of his speeches from the rear end of his special train evidenced something more than a hint that he desired to see not only the drought stricken area but the voters who live there.

More recently the President has made a non-political trip into certain areas of the southland where it is suspected by Chairman Farley's representatives that a goodly number of Republican votes exist. In fairness to the President it must be said with respect to his southern trip, however, that he did little actual speech-making. It is true that he gave the pump-handle handshake wherever people desired to greet him but his campaigning was much less evident in the minds of the reporters than obtained in his visit to the north and to the central west.

And referring to his trip to the central west, I am reminded of the hysteria that has arisen over soil erosion. Undoubtedly, soil erosion is a problem worthy of general attention but the thing that disturbs me as a Washington observer is that soil erosion, like a lot of other problems, suddenly has become mixed up in politics when it is not a political question.

The conservation of soil, of natural resources, has been a matter to which farmers of the nation have addressed themselves for more than a hundred years. Who is it among the farming community that has not attempted at one time or another to stop "washes" or who has not planted some willow trees or some kinds of bush to prevent ditches being cut through the middle of fertile and arable land? And may I ask further, what farmer is there who has not given consideration to crop rotation, to the planting of types of clover or hay or grasses that would of themselves enrich the soil?

All of these things are commonplace. All of them have been done from the time to which the memory runneth not to the contrary. But now we find a perfect hullabaloo—a hysteria—as I said at the beginning about a thing with which farmers long have been familiar.

It comes almost into the category of nonsense. One needs only to visit the oldest communities in the nation to find soils that have been producing for two centuries and that have continued to show increased production through all of that time. The reason is that those farmers knew about soil erosion and they sought to prevent it. Those farmers and nearly all farmers recognize that soil must be fertilized; that it cannot be planted to the same crop eternally without destroying its fertility and they know the necessity and the method for solving the problem. They have acted on that necessity.

Notwithstanding all of these facts we are due to see in the next session of congress and probably for a considerable number of sessions thereafter a bunch of politicians who will be prating about soil conservation long after the farmers have become thoroughly sick at the stomach about the idea. It is just another one of those things upon which hungry political demagogues will leap and continue to use as a vehicle on which to ride into office.

I was born on a farm and grew up there. I know the problem inside out because the farm upon which I was born was susceptible to erosion—"washing" as my father called it—to a greater extent than is usual in farm lands. It is no particular credit to any one to boast about preventing soil erosion because it is a thing that any farmer will want to do if he wants to continue to make his farm pay him a return. It is just as much a part of farm management as it is to see that the work stock does not develop sore shoulders.

But the point of all of this as far as I am concerned is that political capital is being made out of a condition with which politicians ought not to be concerned at all. Some may accuse me of ignoring the drought condition. I do not do so. We have had several years of bad drought conditions. I find it difficult to associate political control over the weather, however, because the claims of politicians have yet to reach very far above their heads.

Announcement is made at last that former President Herbert Hoover is going to take the stump in behalf of Governor Landon and the Republican ticket. Though it was long delayed, it probably has come before the country became convinced that an irreparable breach existed between Governor Landon and Mr. Hoover. Rumors were just beginning to fly and gossip tongues were just beginning to wag that Mr. Hoover would remain out of the Republican picture this year so it is extremely fortunate that he and Governor Landon at last have been brought together, as far as Republicans are concerned.

I am not informed as to the reasons for this delay. It is evident that somebody slipped because it is unnatural for politicians to deliberately decline to take advantage of strength when it is proffered them.

Research among the archives of Fort Monroe, Va., reveals that the high-powered rifle was responsible for the change in color of uniforms of the United States Army from blue to olive drab. Blue, it was discovered, is visible at a longer distance than any other color, and makes an easy target for sharpshooters. Until after the Spanish-American war there were no guns accurate or high-powered enough to make any difference.

Tales and Traditions from American Political History

KICKING TEDDY UP-HILL

IT IS certain that Theodore Roosevelt would never have become President in the manner he did if it hadn't been for Sen. Thomas Platt, then the political boss of New York state. In order to insure the presence of a Republican at Albany, but with inner misgivings which were soon to be realized, he prevailed on the popular Rough Rider to become the gubernatorial candidate, shortly after the Spanish war.

Roosevelt was elected and showed immediately that he could not be controlled by Platt or any boss. Platt's embarrassment was only that of a politician. But the discomfort of his friends, thoroughly disturbed by Teddy's big stick gestures, became a problem.

The solution, finally arrived at by a devious route, appeared before the primaries of 1900. The Republican party in New York was to name a candidate for governor—perhaps Roosevelt again—in September. But the Republican party in the United States had to name a running mate for President McKinley, and the latter convention would be held in June!

Platt decided that Teddy would be the vice-presidential candidate. He would kick Roosevelt up-hill, and out of New York state.

Roosevelt himself realized the move had been launched to shelve him, for so he regarded the vice-presidency. Moreover, neither Mark Hanna of Ohio, a president-maker in a big way in those days, nor McKinley wanted Roosevelt on the national ticket.

But Platt persisted. He was aided by Roosevelt's growing popularity, particularly in the West.

These Westerners carried their Roosevelt enthusiasm to the convention with them. The boom reached proportions that Hanna could not ignore and in a conference with Platt the night before the nominations the president-maker capitulated.

Hanna issued a statement advocating Roosevelt for the vice-presidency and told the newspapermen: "Boys, you can't stop it any more than you could stop Niagara."

Soon to become President at the unfortunate death of McKinley, Roosevelt won the election. And when the gleeful Senator Platt was asked if he would attend the inauguration he replied: "Yes, I am going down to see Theodore Roosevelt take the veil."

NOTICE TO A NOMINEE

A LOT of folks today believe that when political parties are convening, the favored candidates, wherever they may be, have one ear to a keyhole, a wetted finger uplifted to test direction of the political winds, and have set their radio dials the proper wave length to listen in on convention hall. Maybe they're right.

But it wasn't always like that. We had ten Presidents before the man who was destined to become the eleventh, James K. Polk of Tennessee, was informed of his candidacy by telegraph.

The dots and dashes that spelled out Polk's surprising overthrow of Martin Van Buren in the Democratic convention of 1844 were impulses over a newly-built line of telegraph between Baltimore, scene of the convention, and Washington. Polk, who was waiting in Washington, was the first man who received the news in what is today a commonplace fashion.

Van Buren, seeking to succeed himself, was easily the favorite. But he had steadily lost ground at the Baltimore meeting after being placed "on the spot" by the question of the annexation of Texas. Southern delegates began to forsake his candidacy in large numbers. His managers attempted to change the party's new two-thirds rule to a majority ukase, but were unsuccessful.

A steady drift to Polk began on the ninth ballot of the convention. Strangely enough, a letter from Jackson, Van Buren's mentor, which pleaded for harmony, helped complete the rout in Polk's favor.

The telegraph wire served for one more purpose on this momentous occasion. Sen. Silas Wright was in Washington and had been tendered second place on the ticket with Polk. He was angry over the shelving of Van Buren, so the dots and dashes which came back over the wire carried his indignant refusal of this chance to become the vice-president of the United States.

Wrap-Around Apron Frock

1961-B.

Here's the style of apron-frock you've been wanting, a wrap-around that affords unhampered freedom of movement whether you're scrubbing the floor, or hanging drapes.

The wide contrasting ruff collar is feminine and trim while three bright buttons do their share for the bodice closing. Short puff sleeves are cleverly styled, simple, and comfortable and there's a conveniently large pocket to hold what nots. A narrow adjustable belt supplies that refinement known as "center poise" and helps "coverall." Truly it fits like the proverbial glove.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1961-B is available for sizes 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 34 requires 4½ yards of 39-inch material plus ¾ yard of contrast. Send 15 cents for the pattern.

Send for the Barbara Bell Fall Pattern Book containing 100 well-planned, easy-to-make patterns. Exclusive fashions for children, young women, and matrons. Send fifteen cents for your copy.
